Charlottesville City Council
PO Box 911
Charlottesville, VA 22902

Dear Charlottesville City Council Members,

Unique as defined by www.dictionary.com is existing as the only one or as the sole example; single; solitary in type or characteristics. In many ways, my life is not unique, but in certain ways, I feel that it may indeed be.

I am a life-long resident of the city of Charlottesville, and the county of Albemarle, I have spent most of my adult life employed in various jobs with Albemarle County; ranging from a correctional officer at the local jail, a police officer, a teaching assistant in an elementary school, and an office associate in a high school.

I have been involved in volunteer work most of my life, in some form. I was a founding member and President of the Thomas Jefferson Youth Football League, which began as a way for underprivileged youth to experience the joys of football and cheerleading. We came together with local community leaders, to form a program in which scholarships were based on an honor code, not the need for parental financial documentation. We served the city of Charlottesville, and all surrounding counties. Our first season, we provided services for over 700 young people. Funds for equipment, field use, referees and overhead were raised by board members, through fundraising efforts and a donation system, in which we partnered with many local governments, including the city of Charlottesville. I have also spent much time volunteering at my church, teaching Sunday school, and running the youth program for several years. I have completed the training as a CASA volunteer, am currently taking some time off from that, and hope to resume active cases in the coming year.

Yet, all of these things do not make me unique. Many have served their communities, some have lived their entire life in the same area, and countless citizens work in service oriented jobs. However, my personal life choices have afforded me with the unique ability to see different sides of the same situation, to walk in the shoes of another, to experience the very real struggle of racial divide in this country, and especially in this community.

While a police officer with the Albemarle County Police Department, I had witnessed my fair share of "gray area" policing. Profiling was an everyday, acceptable practice, and racial lines were clearly drawn, not only in how the officers responded to the citizens, but even in how they responded towards each other. Nevertheless, I fell in love with a fellow officer, whom was not white. We kept our relationship a secret, until we tired of living a lie, and decided to marry. Of course, we knew one would need to sacrifice their career, for the health and well-being of both, as well as our marriage. I was of lower rank and seniority, so the natural choice was me. That was twenty-two years ago. I have no regrets, as my biggest life choice, has also been my biggest blessing, and the root of all of my personal growth.

In these years, we have raised a bi-racial family, faced ridicule and judgment from a wide variety of people, and tackled issues and demands unique to our situation. I, as a white female, have had the genuine opportunity to look at multiple sides of each issue, to accept the reality of racism into my life, and for it to be very personal, while at the same time, realizing that racism can be seen in any situation, if one is wanting to find it. We have raised a remarkable bi-racial son, that understands and embraces all that he is, refuses to define himself by race, yet, is not blind to the struggles he will still have to face as he continues to grow as a man. We have cheered as the first bi-racial President of the United States was elected, and cried as it appeared to be tearing this country apart at the seams.

Today, it appears that we as a country face yet another strong divide, mostly among racial and economic lines. It is in this atmosphere, that our community is trying to make a good decision on how to move forward, or backwards perhaps, in this monument debate. This is our moment, to show that the Charlottesville area can look at all sides of one issue, understand how the other feels, and reach some sort of compromise that everyone can be proud of. We can set the stage for other localities that are or will face the same dilemma. It is a duty and a privilege to be a part of such a history making committee.

I humbly ask that I am included in this important work that must be done for our community. I have been moved by this issue, and for the first time, am asking to be a part of this government process. I became a police officer to save the world, only in maturity, to realize that I would be blessed to only change one life. Allow me to bring a unique perspective to the table. A lifelong resident, aware of our history, with an eye on our future. A wife, a mother, an advocate, a servant, a voice of reason in times of little understanding. I am willing to do the hard work, make the hard choices, and encourage alternative solutions. I desire to hear the quiet voices in the room, as it is in the whispers that we will find ones true heart.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Warm regards,

Lucy Lane Akers-Allen

Blue Ribbon Commission on Monuments
City of Charlottesville
Letter of Interest – James V. Baker, Jr.

May 27, 2016

Dear Charlottesville City Council:

I am pleased to submit this letter of interest to be considered to serve on the Blue Ribbon Commission on Monuments. As a resident of the City of Charlottesville for over 25 years, my life and career have been devoted to expanding awareness and providing context for the study of history, and our community is at an important juncture as we determine how to celebrate the past of all of our citizens and respect the concerns of our residents now and into the future. Any resolution to the issues surrounding confederate monuments in the city must be able to withstand future political pressure and legal challenges. The best way to ensure this outcome is to allow for citizen input from across the spectrum and to craft recommendations that take into account the concerns of all of our citizens.

My academic interests have always been aligned with commemoration of our past. I have an undergraduate degree in history from the University of Virginia, and my graduate degree is in the field of American Studies in the Department of English at UVa. During my time in the classroom, I studied the American Civil War under Ed Ayers, Michael Holt and Alan Howard and came to understand both the war and the commemoration of the war in its historical context. I have also studied and written on the field of historic preservation in other settings, with my Master's thesis, Modernist Oasis: Rise, Fall, and Rebirth in Palm Springs exploring the topic of historic preservation in Palm Springs, California. My career at the School of Continuing and Professional Studies at UVa has also offered insight and opportunity to examine history and preservation. I was the Program Director for the University of Virginia Civil War Conference from 2004-2010, where I worked with historians including Gary Gallagher, Joan Waugh, Peter Carmichael and Caroline Janney as we examined the legacy of the war and its impact on our collective national memory. I also directed the Virginia Architecture Symposium with K. Edward Lay and Camille Wells as we studied the importance of Virginia architecture of the eighteenth and nineteenth century and shared that insight with students from around the United States. I have learned that each generation is charged with stewardship of the ideals and memories of the past, and that these ideals are neither fixed in time nor understood in the same way by all segments of our society.

My professional work leading complex projects to gain consensus will also be a valuable asset to the Blue Ribbon Commission. I served as chair of the Strategic Planning Committee for the School of Continuing and Professional Studies in 2015, an assignment that required gaining input and consensus from a broad coalition of faculty, staff, and students to determine the future direction of our school. I also chaired the Centennial Celebration Committee for our school in 2015. This assignment generated research on the history of our school and its work with underserved populations, resulting in the publication of a timeline, creation of an exhibit at the Special Collections Library at the University of Virginia, and the collection and cataloging of an archive of our school's history. In each of these appointments, I had to listen to a broad array of constituents, research the historical and cultural significance of work done in the past, and develop recommendations that could be supported across the school and the university. The experience gained in these assignments would serve me well if I were selected to serve on the Blue Ribbon Commission on Monuments.

I have attached my professional resume, which highlights my experience at the University of Virginia, and I would be happy to provide references as requested.

Dear Dear Ms. Rice:

I am applying for one of nine places on the Commission on Race, Monuments, and Public Spaces. I've attached the City Board and Commission Application, completed.

I considered the matter of race and public monuments during my tenure as a Commissioner for the Board of Historic Resources in Richmond. I observed the commerce of race, politics, and urban form in my hometown of Charleston, South Carolina, during my childhood and adolescence. I have been devoted for decades to the certainty that creation, preservation, and demolition of structures and spaces is a political matter. I met this principle again my research into the material culture of Cairo and the manner of its treatment under the British concessionary (i.e., imperialist) administration of Egypt. I also, as a matter of understanding the context of my youth in Charleston, and the Southern culture in which my family has lived for several generations, have made myself familiar with American slave society and the political and military course of the American Civil War. (I lack completely any romantic view of either.) I know as well as the history of Jim Crow and the Lost Cause and Civil Rights movements. And I've lived in Charlottesville or in Albemarle County since 1983, but for 30 months in Baltimore.

As an historic architect, I've restored a mid-nineteenth building in Lexington and at the University of Virginia. Both won Virginia Society American Institute of Architects honor awards. I was the architect for the rehabilitation of the National Bank (Wells Fargo) Tower on the Charlottesville Downtown Mall. Dealing with the details of restoration and relocation of historic structures is a professional specialty, as is aiding the ethical interpretation of the past.

I want to serve the City on this matter, in the nature of answering the need of my neighbors. I've been part of a number of other regularly-meeting civic panels, and I understand and would welcome this responsibility.

Thank you very much.

Sincerely,

Brian Broadus

Subject: Robert E. Lee statue and park

Mr. Mayor and Councilors
As you consider this issue, I want to suggest an idea that I have been kicking around in my head for the last year or so.
I would like to see a statue in Court Square that addresses the tragedy of slavery in the most human terms—a realistic rendering of a family of slaves being torn apart at the auction block.
I envision a statue in bronze showing a mother, father and one or more children at the time when the father is dragged off by one arm while reaching back with his other arm and looking in despair at his family after he is sold and separated from his wife and children (forgive my artistic license). For me that is the most terrible and tragic image of slavery. The memorial should cause its visitors to feel a range of emotions running from pain, anger, pride, shame and love.
We need to publically recognize the evil of slavery and respect the memory of those who suffered slavery and state sanctioned racism and the grievances still felt by many of their descendants.
As you probably are aware, the auction block for selling slaves was located near 0 Court Square.
As you face the Albemarle County Courthouse, there is a space to the right that might be large enough. Ironically, on the left is the statue of a confederate soldier and a cannon and further away is the Stonewall Jackson statue. Locating it by the courthouse will require County and perhaps court approval.
Along with the statue there needs to be information displayed putting the statue in historical context.
Hopefully the development of this project would involve the black and white community in a larger discussion of racism past and present and perhaps lead to some reconciliation. With the assistance of the Jefferson School African American Heritage Center, UVA, Thomas Jefferson Foundation, and the Montpelier Foundation, the process may have educational value.
I believe the cost of the slave memorial could be raised from private donors.
Thank you for your consideration.
Frank

REASONS FOR WANTING TO SERVE ON THE BLUE RIBBON COMMISSION ON RACE, MEMORIALS, AND PUBLIC SPACES

A profound respect of the public realm is the primary reason that makes Charlottesville a World Class City. Following naturally from our fore-bearers, the support, reverence, and preservation of the public realm is likewise zealously guarded and fostered by our citizens today. It is just this respect and desire to protect Charlottesville's distinctive legacy that has lead me to apply for a seat on the Blue Ribbon Commission on Race, Memorials, and Public Spaces.

My family history and civic dedication in Charlottesville have taught me that the diversity of our community and our Commonwealth is the most valuable asset that we have to guarantee our future. As a child, I was steeped in the history of the Lost Cause in Richmond and Southampton County. As a young adult, I was influenced greatly by my grandfather, a founder of the Virginia Council of Human Relations , who strongly believed that prejudice toward anyone was not only unchristian but also an evil. His guidance has left an imprint on my life and propelled me to value every citizen and their contributions, pain, and hope.

Throughout the 37 years that I have lived in Charlottesville, I have tried to act on my grandfather's wise ethics. My experiences have led me to love and be immersed in the creative impulse of our City to not only confront our past but also to search for and find a better way toward inclusion for all members of our community.

In my view, the icons that we create in the public realm, be they solid or transitory, should symbolize our ideals for the future, embody a realization of the past that is inclusive of every citizen, and help bring every member of the community together, and never divide us. Our understanding of history evolves as we become more enlightened and the community more diverse. This turn requires that we approach the future with an open mind, respectful of every citizen, and keep a principled eye on the prize of inclusion for all citizens.

My long dedication and demonstrated open approach to discovering the future of Charlottesville, I believe could be of service to the Blue Ribbon Commission. I would be honored to serve the Council in this important endeavor to find a path that honors the public realm for all the members of our community.

CONTINUATION SHEET: Boards & Commission Application - Carl L Chappell, Jr

Schools attended continued: Numerous schools and courses over a 30-year period through the US Army including Army, Department of Defense and international programs. Programs included management, leadership, administration, logistics, personnel management, foreign language (German & Dutch), international relations, government and political science.

Reasons for wanting to service on this board: I am primarily focused on the disposition of the various Confederate monuments and other remembrances. We as a city and a society are having to address something that I personally have had to address in my own life. I grew up in a Southern family and believed fully in the cultural legend of the noble South fighting for their freedom and way of life against overwhelming odds. Robert E Lee was my childhood hero. I still greatly admire him as a military leader. As I grew up, studied history, and experience life through the military, saw combat and lived all over the United States, as well as overseas, I have had to reconcile this admiration with a reality that is far different. That reality is otherwise admirable men chose to violate their oaths of office in order to support a cause dedicated to the perpetuation of slavery, not only as an economic measure, but as an explicit system of racial control (not an interpretation, but a fact--clearly stated in the states' articles of succession). The "History" I grew up on was revisionist resulting from the post-Reconstruction Lost Cause movement. The various monuments and flying the Confederate flag, aside from legitimately honoring heritage and courage, were also intended to support Jim Crow segregation and as a reaction to the civil rights movement. I appreciate those who value symbols of their heritage and identity, even if historically false, while also understanding for others they are rallying cries for racists and bigots. My challenge, and the city's, is to find a balance that preserves history, that acknowledges various groups' understanding of that history, while not perpetuating falsehoods and hateful beliefs and actions.
