This case would ordinarily fall to you, but I advised on it and should therefore probably keep it. I'm agreeing to continue to Feb 7.

Thanks,
Matt

Yes-the intent is for lawyers not to access the internet unless they are appearing before the Court. The problem has arisen that attorneys are not looking up caselaw and statutes. There has been a public complaint, which has been confirmed in some cases, that the lawyers are checking ESPN in court, etc. There were similar comments about the officers who were on their phones in court prior to testifying before the grand jury so the rule is no access to the internet unless the attorney is appearing before the court.

I have received your order and will communicate it. the order states that "the computer or other devices shall not be used to ... access the the internet via any method." If we cannot access the internet, which is how we access dropbox and our Outlook calendars, we cannot use it to access our calendars. Similarly, we would be unable to use it for access to caselaw and statutes. Is this the court's intent?

I would like a continuance because I want to see what the neurology people come up with and to give everyone time to supplement the file. I know Phil has been working on some other things and you were out of town. Do you object? If not, can you give me a date and I will send a letter to the court? thanks.

Sonia was just looking through the file and at some point there was a concern that you might have a conflict. I am trying to find out, on this end, what the thought was but wanted to make you aware of it. Vince's father is Vernon Leroy Shifflett but I don't think that would have been it.

Sonia was just looking through the file and at some point there was a concern that you might have a conflict. I am trying to find out, on this end, what the thought was but wanted to make you aware of it. Vince's father is Vernon Leroy Shifflett but I don't think that would have been it.

This may be beyond your purview, but let me ask you a question about his incarceration. He got moved down to Farmville because a family member of the Shifletts works at the jail and claimed some kind of conflict of interest because he felt uncomfortable overseeing Joe as an inmate. I was told this person had direct supervisory contact with Joe as an inmate. Rather than moving Joe somewhere else in the jail, they shipped him out so now Joe can't get work release. Any thoughts?

I know you're out of town, but I'm hoping you will respond. I just got off the phone with JT's 86 year old grandfather. Joe's grandmother is also 86. She has cancer. She has been in the hospital but was just released to go home. They are giving her a few days to live. She is not communicative and hospice is giving her drugs to keep her comfortable. I want to get Joe out for a week for some kind of compassionate leave. Will you object if I file something to try and get him furloughed for a few days? Who in your office would handle it? I'm actually concerned that if I wait until you get back, she will be dead. Let me know. Thanks.

I really cant bc it depends on the circumstances of the charge here as well as his cr hx and we look at all of them separately. Generally, though, if it was a np pursuant to an agreement we will object.

I have a client who was charged with possessing marijuana and drunk driving. Your office nolle prossed the marijuana charge. He pled to the dui. Client wants to get the marijuana charge expunged. He had a prior conviction out of state for possession of paraphernalia, I think, or it could have been possession of marijuana. Will your office object to the expungement? I'm not certain we could establish good cause. Also, when the statute says no prior conviction, I'm not sure if that means anywhere or in VA? I'm trying to help this client decide whether to pursue this. If you can't answer until we file the petition, that's fair too. Thanks.

I know this may seem like a weird thing to focus on but I want to make sure that I cover the cartridge count in this matter. Jim shot a deer some time before this incident. I know he doesn't remember exactly when and did not want to guess. Can you see if he can give you a general time frame? I don't for a minute doubt what he says and the count adds up that way but when the question is asked whether I verified I want to be prepared with an answer.

Thanks
